Vol. 36, No. 24

Editor: Paul Burnham

Twelve members of Wilton=s finest service organization (Boucher, Brown, Burnham, Goldman, Johnson, Kent, Lavin, Mais, Nigro, Spencer, Russo, White) braved surprisingly balmy weather for lunch on a fine mid-December Friday – we missed the rest of you. Also, Luis made a quick appearance before heading back to work. But no guests or prospective members.

We will be having our traditional gift exchange next Friday. “Gifts which contain an abundance of alcohol will be most appreciated,” says our Treasurer. “Gifts of such nature made to me personally which I would then not have to worry about being stolen by my tablemate would be even more greatly appreciated.” says our Treasurer. (Not sure about that.)

Frank spoke again as to his support for a grant to the Anini Orphanage in Guatemala. He hopes to pull together the Trustees of the Foundation for a meeting to consider the request.

Pat discussed plans for the annual smoke and CO₂ detector project.

Paul reminder club members that the craft fair will again take place on the Saturday of Memorial Day weekend.

Pat (who someone managed to get past our treasurer without paying for the lunch he did not order) succeeded in having his ticket pulled but did not manage to pull the joker. LOSER!!!

Camille was presented with a Holiday gift from the club despite the fact that she refuses to prepare a salad topped with blackened chicken for our Treasurer.

It was decided there would be no meeting on December 30.

Pam, put on the spot at the last moment, gave her bio. She grew up in Pennsylvania, spent a few years in Manhattan, and the last 22 in Wilton. Career-wise she started in youth fashions, watches, family, library, and now sells gravesites at Hillside Cemetery when she is not running the affairs of the Wilton Congregational Church or serving on the Town’s Parks and Recreation Commission. Four children, one out of college, one at Fairfield, one at Georgetown and the youngest at the High School.

Special thanks to our president and First Lady for hosting a wonderful Holiday party last week. Very much appreciated by all!

See you Friday.
